HOBBY HORSE ARMS

(né Commercial Hotel)

The Commercial Hotel was built in the 1860s at the corner of Brock Street and First Avenue.

It has quite a colourful history. It lived up to its name of Commercial Hotel, being the favourite stopover for a now almost extinct species: the drummer (traveling salesman who toured rural Canada, stopping in villages and towns to display and sell wares).

Its amenities even included a billiard hall.
In the early 1900s it was owned by the Nokes family who also operated a livery from the premises.

In 1981 the structure, then more than 100 years old, was moved from its foundations and wheeled through the heart of Uxbridge to its present location on Main Street North.
Restoration began in 1983 and now the old Commercial Hotel lives on as the Hobby Horse Arms.

This Historic Restaurant has been in business and run by the Byers family for over 24 years.
