

My Dear Beloved Students and Children of the World.

You might be now confused, scared, bored, or even sad. The world is busy with this virus issue and many other challenges. Adults are talking, making predictions, putting lots of restrictions. Presidents, leaders, professionals, press conferences, all talking, arguing, blaming, maybe scaring you!

May be they don't see you, no one talks to you or your voice is not heard. No one talks about you, comforts you or tells don't be scared, or it will be ok!

You don't know what tomorrow will bring and how long this is going to be? Trust me, I know these feelings. I know you are looking for answers. We might not have these answerers for you now. We might not be able to promise you anything or tell you it will be over soon. We might not communicate details with you. You might be still alone, scared, confused or bored!

My Beloved Students and Children of the World, I want you to know that we are here for you because you are important, you are the future, you are the hope! Your smiles brighten our days, your laughter softens our hearts, your voice is like music to our ears singing songs of joys. You are the beautiful world!

These difficult times will go away one day, it will be a story you will read to your children when they cuddle around you. It will be a lesson you will learn from. It will be a memory.

My beloved students, I was walking in hallways today, checking classrooms and thought to let you know that we miss you. I miss reminding you not to run in hallways, I miss your stubborn attitudes, I miss looking for you to give you your homework we find on the ground, I miss you knocking on my door to complain, seeking an advice, telling me stories or sharing ideas with me. I miss seeing your papers, books, pencils all over the place. I miss reminding you to go to the science lab instead of lunch room. I miss waking you up when you come early in the morning and sleep on my couch in the office. I miss your laughter, stories and un-ended questions. I miss your imaginations, dreams and your beautiful stories.

My Beloved Students and Children of the World, we are there for you. You are the future, you are the hope, you are the sunshine that lighten up this earth and warms up our hearts. We need you to be strong and happy. We need you to learn and grow with knowledge. We need you to explore, invent and inspire us. We need you to build schools, hospitals, parks, and everything beautiful and beneficial. We need you to fight poverty and hunger. We need you to build us a better world full of peace, happiness, love and hope. So please never stop learning. Read books, explore, fill your mind with knowledge and your soul with passion and hope. Reach up and shine like a star to fill our earth with light. So please don't stop reading and learning. If the school hallways are empty build your own school and read. Travel with history, sing with literature, explore with science, invent with math, pray with faith, learn the world you will build. Always remember you are important, you are the future, you are the hope, you are our world!

Sincerely,
