Fr. Feller's Corner

Whether it is achieving a better yield in a sandy field, increasing customers, or achieving better efficiency, professionals often set goals to direct their business. So, what is a priest's goal(s)? The Catholic Church has taught extensively on this. Much of this teaching is based on the ministry of Jesus. This makes sense. Jesus is the only priest. Ordained men simply participate in his priesthood through the Sacrament of Holy Orders. The vocation of the priest is a service to the lay faithful's full, conscious, and active participation in Christ's life and mission.

It is ordinary for each priest to offer the sacraments, teach, and lead people in charity. What this specifically looks like depends upon the personal capacities of the man, the community, and the Holy Spirit. While God is not done helping me grow as a man and as a priest, I ask the question, "Today, what is the goal that is directing my efforts?" It is easy for me to think about the deadlines to be met, homilies to be prepared, sacraments to celebrate, and people to welcome. But what goal unites all these good examples of ministry into a simple statement?

My goal is Jesus Christ. I want to build up the Body of Christ in the Holy Spirit (Eph 4:12, 1 Cor 12:12-31) thus glorifying our Heavenly Father. Building up the Body of Christ means helping lay women, men, and children grow into the fullness of Christ. This happens when our human lives are fully animated, restored, and transformed by the Life of God. Meeting Jesus and the Love of the Father has sparked my desire to help people receive and live in His gift of life.

This invitation of Christ is given to all, and all are called to share it with everyone (1 Tim 2:4). Growing into Christ is built upon the ongoing proclamation and reception of the Gospel Message, evangelization, maturing in our Christian identity received at Baptism, catechesis and formation, and being sent as salt and leaven for the world, mission of charity, (Matt 28:19-20, 5:13-16, Eph 4:20).

I believe this is the Father's goal and He will help us.
