Karen Greene, the protagonist in the novel, is injured in a traumatic riding accident. Even though she slowly heals, she is still scared of other horses and neglects her own horse, Robin. At another riding facility, Karen befriends Heather, who helps her through the process of overcoming her fears and relearning riding techniques. The novel is very touching, as Karen struggles to bond with Robin, her own horse.

I must say that this novel was fantastic. An easy and fast-moving book, it was a pleasure to read. Not only are Feld's descriptions vivid and moving, she paints beautiful characters who are relatable and complex. This story was very inspiring, and really developed the relationship between Karen and her horse. Girls who enjoy this book should certainly look into the entire series. Although the reading level is quite simple, I would recommend this book to anyone. It truly is fun to read, and took me to a whole new world as I was engrossed in Karen's life and struggles. This book evokes a range of emotions, and draws in the reader 100%.
