The Temptress Four by Gaby Triana is a story about four best friends graduating from high school. They have planned to go on a cruise for their graduation celebration. Before the trip, at their grad night party, they go to a fortune teller who predicts the unthinkable. Should the four best friends go on the cruise and take their chances or should they play it safe and stay home?

This book is a good “what to do after high school” attention grabber. What I liked the most about this book is that you can relate to all four friends in the story. Each of these girls could be your friend from high school. You can relate to the fear of wondering if your friendship will last forever. The descriptions of the cruise makes you feel like you are there. The story is told in such a way that it keeps you hanging and of course I wanted to know what all the girls decide to do at the end of their cruise; and most of all if Fiona is happy with her decision.

I would recommend this book to be checked out of the library. I think this book is good but would not feel like I needed to rush out and buy it. I think this book is a very good “friends forever” book and very realistic when it comes to friendship problems. I think girls 14-18 years old would enjoy this book.
