Sketch of the dwarf

It was the 3rd day of Tatyana Vasilievna Goloveshko's vacation on the Black Sea coast. She was with her husband Vladimir and her daughter Anyuta. It was a quite warm, humid night and the windows of the flat were opened. The witness could not sleep being too hot, so she laid in bed staring at the wall.

Suddenly she heard kinda footsteps and she immediately turned her head, as if she was forced to do that. She glanced out of the window and there she saw 2 humanoid figures, greenish-gray in color. Both entities were on the loggia near the refrigerator and table. Apparently, one over the table and one over refrigerator, because their heads almost touched the ceiling. Both suddenly jumped to the floor so that the witness realized they were the size of a dwarf.

At first she thought of a hallucination but then she assumed everything was real. One was taller and lighter colored than the other, the second more shadowy in appearance. The carpet seemed to wave as one of them entered through the window approaching her husband's bed. Tatyana blinked for a moment and when she opened her eyes, the strange humanoid was standing over her.

The entity was small, only about 1.30 centimeters in height. She was sure that she felt no fear; she only felt curiosity and amazement. The entity bent low over her staring at her body. The figure seemed to be wrapped in a mat gray-green light. His skin was very pale and his face seemed "bloodless". His head was pear-shaped, like a pear put upside down. The entity was staring fixedly at the witness with eyes that resembled deep black holes or hollows. He had no eyebrows, only folds of skin and no eyelashes. No neck, with folds of skin instead of the neck. Remarkably the being had a short beard. The witness had the impression that the being was elderly or aged; it was not a visual observation but more like a "feeling". She saw the being's upper part only: his head.

She clearly felt that the entity prevented her from moving her head down. She felt torpid and paralyzed. She was unable to move her arms or say a word. Her heart was beating intensively, and unwilling tears filled her eyes. The 2nd alien was identical to the first one, but smaller in height. Both resembled "ancient gnomes". An idea suddenly popped up in her head reminding her daughter and she immediately became fearful that something would happen to her. She could only stare mesmerized at the strange pair. Then both of them slowly moved back from her bed, floating just above the floor and moments later she heard a strange muffled shot. She then turned her head but both "gnomes" had disappeared, dissolving in the air.

The carpet was back to normal now. Seconds later, the witness saw a spherical lighted object fly inside her room, something like a luminous ball, the size of a tennis ball, leaving a smoky trail behind. The flying ball of light was making a hissing or crackling sound. Tatyana became frightened, believing that the strange sphere was a ball-lighting. The ball of light then quickly flew into the other room and then returned to then flew out of the opened window. She jumped from her bed and rushed to shut all the windows. She thought she heard another muzzled rumor and look at the time. It was 2:40 am. She then shut the door as well and she returned into her bedroom where she distinctly smelled an oppressive air, a specific smell of hot iron. In the morning she realized that all the clocks in the apartment had stopped at exactly 2:55 am. The television set was also ruined.
