Science: What is a Habitat?

Video Questions:

1. The octopus's body is covered with hundreds of suction cups called suckers. He uses them to hold on to things. What else does he use them for?
2. The octopus doesn't have any bones in his body. How does this help him hide from his enemies?
3. How does a polar bear's thick, white fur help him survive in the cold icy arctic region where they live?

What other special features (adaptations) do polar bears have?

4. Bamboo is the only food that Pandas eat. They don't eat the bamboo leaves. They strip the leaves off and chew on the tough bamboo stalks. To get enough nourishment (food) to survive, Pandas must spend almost the entire day eating. What two special features do they have to help them prepare and eat the tough bamboo stalks?
