

Outlook

Reply to your text

From David Sarricks <sarricks@hotmail.com>Date Fri 8/15/2025 7:35 PMTo patricia grymala <pgrymala@gmail.com>Cc John Larson <mlarson46@hotmail.com>; David Cravens <davidcravens58@gmail.com>; Aileen Law <aileenlaw@hotmail.com>

Pat:

I read your text, more than once, and I'm simply gobsmacked by the audacity of your baseless allegation that I told someone they couldn't get on the ballot because the "slots were filled". I dare you, or that lying miscreant (whomever that may be), to repeat that defamatory statement in public. You're simply ignorant of the facts. But that doesn't surprise me. You seem to fit the mold of the other malcontents that have plenty to complain about but never seem to have an answer or offer to work towards a solution.

You conveniently disregard the fact that you're on the board and had ample opportunity to provide input on the ballot and/or the newsletter. But you didn't.

Not that I need to defend myself, but most of the board members made an effort to find owners that would run for the board. What effort did you make? I was turned down by no less than six owners that I contacted. When Aileen got a reply from Antoine, we finalized the ballot and put it in the mail.

But you're too ignorant to realize that the bylaws require that the ballots be mailed within a certain window of time, prior to the annual meeting. And there are no provisions in the bylaws that govern the process of placing candidates on the ballot. To my knowledge, it's always been an informal process. I've only been a board member for two years.

The first year that I was on the ballot, I was approached by a board member and was asked to put my name on the ballot. Same for you. Are you suggesting that the board has a responsibility to enquire of every owner whether or not they want to serve on the board?

As far as the "write-in" question, you imply that I made that decision unilaterally. Not so. I simply copied from a previous ballot that included that provision. But again, since you really don't have the mind to make informed statements, I can understand your naivete.

And there was notice posted. Had you bothered to look, you would have found notice of the annual meeting and election on the website. I posted notice on June 30th, with a deadline of July 31st for candidate statements. Did you offer to assist with the process of preparing the newsletter and ballot. No. You simply sat on your hands and complained about anything that popped into your simple mind.

Your assertion that I single handedly made a "joke" of the election is so far from the truth that I won't dignify that statement with a reply.

You play the victim very well. I'll bet you voted for that fascist criminal in the White House.

Don't bother with a reply. I really don't give a fuck what you have to say about anything. No one speaks to me in that manner with impunity.

Feel free to share this with the other conspiracy theorists.

David Sarricks