

The Green Chalice ministry of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) began in 2007 in Kentucky. It grew out of a 1977 General Assembly resolution that created a Task Force on Ecology. The Green Chalice ministry's goal is to encourage congregations to care for creation.

How it started

- The Green Chalice ministry's origins lie in the 1977 General Assembly resolution that created a Task Force on Ecology.
- The Green Chalice ministry's mission is to connect Christian faith, spiritual practice, and creation consciousness.
- The Green Chalice ministry recognizes congregations that are good stewards of God's creation.

How it's growing

- The Green Chalice ministry has grown to include over 230 congregations and ministries.
- The Green Chalice ministry partners with Blessed Tomorrow, a coalition of religious partners working to advance climate solutions.

How it's being implemented

- Congregations that participate in the Green Chalice ministry are encouraged to live out their faith by caring for creation.
- Congregations are empowered with ideas and resources to live gently on the earth.
