

Dear hiring team,

I was so excited to see your post because it's exactly the type of job I'm looking for: an opportunity to bring my experience and enthusiasm for storytelling to an organization that sets the standard for high-quality management content.

In addition to my photo training, I would bring an organized and systems-level perspective to this role. I view this opportunity as a puzzle, and like to think about which parts need to come together in order to make a great final product. My approach is to have in-depth conversations with my team members, and the various stakeholders, before each project. This helps me nail down the logistics — from location to talent.

From there, the fun begins: fleshing out the concept and identifying what visuals will best represent it. Ideation and storyboarding are essential in this step. I know I'm not right all the time, so I enjoy working with a diverse team that can bring in new perspectives, brainstorm, and pitch ideas that will make the final product stronger. Whenever possible, I also try to seek out other sources for inspiration, like magazines, which allow me to observe different ways of expression and storytelling.

Given this experience and my enthusiasm for the work you do, I believe I'd make a great addition to your team your work exemplifies exactly what I believe: There's an opportunity to tell a compelling story in everything — all you have to do is deliver it right.

I'd love to come in and speak with you more about what I'd be able to offer in this role and I believe I'd make valuable contributions to your team.

Thank you for your time and consideration!

EDUCATION

How an Electronic Technician Can Help You with Better Ads and Brochures

For many people, industrial advertising is a difficult chore. It's detailed work, and highly technical. To get the perfect photo, you need someone with the technical know-how of a Technician

That's where I can help.

As a freelance industrial and high-tech Photographer who is also a graduate Electronic Technician (40 Years on the electronic service bench), I know how to capture the fine details of any electronic apparatus

Here are my qualifications:

I have an Electronic Technician Background (Electronic Technician Metropolitan University Formally Ryerson),

Have been trained in Industrial safety procedures
Know the value of confidentiality agreements
