Dear Hiromi,

How are you? It's already been a year since you studied in London. A new Japanese girl named Ayano came a few months after you left. I don't know her well because she's in a different class. She's coming to my house for dinner next week, so we'll talk more then. I want to practice my Japanese.

It's great that you're coming to visit! I'll finish school on June 25, and you'll get here the next day, right? We'll all go on a trip from Saturday. My parents will take us to Wales, a small country next to England. There are beautiful mountains and beaches there. My uncle just bought a motor home. Have you ever seen one? My parents are going to use it because it's a cheap way to travel. There are beds in it, so we don't need to stay in hotels. It'll be fun!

The first place my parents want to go is West Wales. There's a festival called Pembrokeshire Fish Week. You can eat many types of fish and learn how to cook them, too. The cheese in Wales is famous and delicious. You love cheese, so I think that'll be your favorite part of the holiday! There's a big festival called the Great British Cheese Festival in South Wales. It's in September, so we can't go, but we can still eat a lot of cheese in Wales!

My mother says you'll need warm clothes because it can get cold. It'll be great to see you.

Jill
