

The Sinking Ship

The Situation:

After seven days of sailing in horrible weather, the ship you are a passenger on is about to sink somewhere in the Pacific Ocean.

The captain has lost all contact with the outside world, but he hopes and believes that the ship is not far from some uninhabited Pacific Islands.

The captain informs you that the ship will go down within a few minutes. He orders you to wake up five of the sleeping passengers, because the lifeboat unfortunately only has room for five out of the ten passengers, in addition of you and the captain. While handing you the passenger list, the captain says:

Let the other passengers sleep peacefully as long as possible, be careful not to wake them. At worst it can come to fights, and that would do no good.
